

Dr. Rania Agha, MD, FAAD, FAACS

Dr. Agha is a double board-certified dermatologist and cosmetic surgeon. She is a fellow of the American Academy of Dermatology, and The American Academy of Cosmetic Surgery.

Dr. Agha is an assistant clinical professor at the University of Illinois at Chicago department of Dermatology and Jesse Brown VA Medical Center in Chicago.

She has been in private solo practice of Dermatology and Cosmetic Surgery for 10 years.

Dr. Agha is a graduate of the Chicago Medical School, Northwestern University, and Indiana University School of Medicine.

She has an extensive research background and published numerous scientific articles in peer reviewed journals.

Dr. Agha currently serves on the board of trustees as a treasurer for the American Academy of Cosmetic Surgery, as the Young Physician Section Delegate for the American Academy of Cosmetic Surgery at the American Medical Association, and as a member of the Dermatology Section Council.

She also serves as a skin cancer ambassador and a volunteer for the SpotMe® free skin cancer screening program for the American Academy of Dermatology, and she was recognized by the president of the American Academy of Dermatology in a presidential award for her volunteer work in skin cancer detection.

In addition to treating patients, Dr. Agha conducts clinical research for various skin diseases including but not limited to acne, alopecia areata, eczema and many others.

In her spare time, Dr. Agha enjoys playing the piano. She has performed at several recitals, along with her 3 sons, all of whom are also great pianists.