

Dr. Efrat Solomon-Cohen graduated her medical studies at the Tel Aviv University Sackler School of Medicine, Israel, in 2010, as well as a Master's degree in Occupational and Environmental Medicine at the Sackler School of Public Health in 2014. She completed her residency in dermatology at the Division of Dermatology, Rabin Medical Center. During her residency, she underwent extensive training in the field of lasers and energy-based devices. She is also the author of several scientific publications.

Dr. Solomon-Cohen currently practices dermatology at both Rabin Medical Center and an outpatient practice. Her main focus of clinical work and research is occupational dermatology, contact dermatitis, energy-based devices and aesthetics.