

Dr. Deirdre Hooper is a board-certified dermatologist who specializes in medical, cosmetic, and laser dermatology. As a child, she frequently accompanied her mother in surgeries and always knew she would pursue a career in medicine. Through her love of biology, her caring passion for patients of all ages, and her keen eye for the visual arts she found her way into the field of Dermatology. Dr. Hooper is committed to educating and treating every patient so they feel confident in the skin that they are in. She utilizes her advanced knowledge of three dimensional facial and body anatomy to achieve natural, restorative results for her patients.

Dr. Hooper is an honors graduate of Louisiana State University School of Medicine. She received her undergraduate degree in biology from Louisiana Tech University, where she graduated cum laude. Her postdoctoral training included Louisiana State University Department of Dermatology as well as a Women's Dermatologic Society Mentorship with Dr. Pearl Grimes in Los Angeles, CA. Dr. Hooper contributed to the rebuilding of New Orleans after Hurricane Katrina by co-founding Audubon Dermatology with Dr. Sarah Jackson in 2006. In addition to her private practice, Dr. Hooper is an Associate Clinical Professor in the Department of Dermatology at both Louisiana State University and Tulane University. She serves as chair of the Women's Dermatologic Society Legacy Council and as a member of the fundraising committee and the practice advisory committee of the WDS. She is a member of the American Academy of Dermatology Council on Communications and past member of AAD's Youth Education Committee. Dr. Hooper is also a member of the American Society of Dermatologic Surgery, serving on the Quest Engagement work group and Annual Meeting planning committee. Additionally, she is a member and past president of the Louisiana Dermatology Society. She is a member of the Noah Worcester Dermatological Society, the New Orleans Women's Dermatologic Journal Club, and the Leaders Society of the Dermatology Foundation.

Dr. Hooper is an expert injector who lectures and performs live injections at local and national Dermatology and Plastic Surgery meetings. She is a dedicated clinical trialist and a published author of academic dermatological literature. Due to her acknowledged expertise in medical and cosmetic dermatology, Dr. Hooper is regularly quoted in major publications and broadcasts a bi-weekly medical news segment for our local Fox 8 News station. Dr. Hooper trains residents and colleagues in cosmetic and laser dermatology around the country.

Dr. Hooper lives in New Orleans, LA with her husband and their three children. In her spare time, she enjoys maintaining a healthy lifestyle, reading, traveling, and horseback riding.
