(USA)

Janine Hopkins, MD, founder of Hopkins Dermatology, is a board-certified dermatologist in Monroe, Louisiana. Dr. Hopkins started her solo practice in 1996 after completing her residency training in the Department of Dermatology at Louisiana State University School of Medicine in New Orleans, Louisiana. She was fortunate to train in a progressive program with an excellent faculty that emphasized a thorough education in all aspects of general, surgical and cosmetic dermatology.

Dr. Hopkins is a board-certified member of the American Academy of Dermatology. She currently holds the position of Secretary/Treasurer of the Louisiana Dermatological Society and active member of their Advocacy Committee. Dr. Hopkins is a member of multiple dermatologic and medical societies including the American Society of Dermatologic Surgery, and the Louisiana Dermatologic Society. Dr. Hopkins supports the Dermatology Foundation as a member of the Annenberg Circle and served as a Louisiana Vice-chair for three years and State Chair for two years. She has provided training to colleagues on various facial rejuvenation treatments using lasers, fillers, and neuromodulators. In addition, Dr. Hopkins lectures throughout the year at various educational meetings and teaches as an industry expert on Fotona laser systems.

A heightened dedication and emphasis on skin cancer treatment and prevention for men and women through protection and rejuvenation remains the priority of her practice, which employs twelve individuals, each dedicated to providing excellent care for their patients. In 2019, Dr. Hopkins collaborated with SkinCure Oncology to become 1 of 2 practices in Louisiana to offer IG-SRT for the non-surgical cure of skin cancer. In 2009, Dr. Hopkins launched MDMinerals & Cosmetics to provide a premier mineral makeup collection for her patient's health and beauty. She currently has a skincare line, Hopkins Dermatology Rx collection, to provide patients with medical-grade skincare products.

Dr. Hopkins and her husband are supporters of area schools and many local charities, such as The Children's Coalition and Med Camps, American Red Cross and United Way. She has been married thirty years to her husband, Ted Hopkins, a commercial banker and investor who manages the Hopkins Dermatology practice. She is a proud mother of a talented daughter, Madison, and dedicated son, Thomas, as well as host mother and mentor to French student, Gustave. A member of St. Alban's Episcopal Church in Monroe, Louisiana, Dr. Hopkins also enjoys traveling, horseback riding, running and daily exercise. Spending time with friends and family is a top priority. Learning and staying up to date on the ever evolving and expanding specialty of dermatology is an ongoing passion for Dr. Janine Hopkins.
