

Dr. Assi Levi (Israel)

Assi Levi is a graduate of the Hadassah – Hebrew University Medical School, Jerusalem, Israel. During his residency in dermatology at Hadassah Medical Center, he was trained in the field of photobiology. He also studied the effects of natural killer cells on melanomas and different viruses at the Lautenberg Center for General and Tumor Immunology, Department of Immunology and Cancer Research, The Hebrew University Medical School, Jerusalem, Israel.

After completing his residency, Dr. Levi joined the Dermatology Division of Rabin Medical Center, Petah-Tikva, Israel and was trained in the field of Photobiology and Lasers in dermatology.

His research is focused on photobiology and energy based devices. His main clinical interests are photobiology and lasers in dermatology, and he is the author of more than 50 peer-reviewed scientific publications. He is the head of the Photodermatosis Service and a senior physician at the Laser Unit in Rabin Medical Center.